Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Caulfield -King house is located at 11131 Game Preserve Road, Gaithersburg, Maryland, within Seneca Creek State Park. Game Preserve Road can be reached off of Clopper Road, very close to the state park entrance. It has been restored by the Rhodes family under the Curatorship Program of the Department of Natural Resources.

This structure is constructed of wood frame, set upon a stone foundation, and covered with clapboard. It is essentially a "T"-shaped design that is two-stories tall with an open front porch that spans the front facade. The roof is covered with asbestos shingles and has two dormers centered on the front facade with 2/2 windows. Other windows on the house vary between 6/2 and 4/2. There are other recent ramp additions that have been added to both the front porch and back enclosed porch. Overall the exterior decoration is minimal, with the exception of the front facade with the porch that defines the character of the house. Outbuildings on the site include a one-story cinder block garage and right behind that a one-story wood shed.

The first floor interior is arranged with four rooms, a bathroom, and stairwell located within the main block; while the rear addition contains the kitchen and an enclosed back porch. The staircase follows the overall design of the house with simply carved banisters and posts. The second floor contains four bedrooms and a bath, with an attic crawlspace above.
